WATERSHED DESCRIPTION: The French Broad River watershed consists of numerous tributaries confined to narrow flood plains within mountainous East Tennessee and western North Carolina. Land use is predominantly rural residential. The French Broad River is primarily cobble, silt, and gravel bottomed at this location. The existing vegetation along the river channel is mixed deciduous hardwoods and shrubs. The riverbanks in this location are highly eroded with most bank side vegetation undercut.

PROJECT DESCRIPTION: The applicant proposes to stabilize two sections of riverbank with shot rock armoring. The stabilization will cover an area 300 linear feet in Phase I and 400 linear feet in Phase two. Undercut trees would be removed, the stream bank regarded, and shot rock installed at approximately 2:1 slope. No other clearing of existing vegetation is anticipated. Standard erosion control devices would be used to prevent sediment from entering flowing water. Upon completion of the work, all disturbed areas would be stabilized.
